The Master’s degree in Art Studies has existed since 1993, and has maintained an important presence within the academic graduate programs in Mexico. Thanks to its high academic quality, it has received national (PNPC – CONACYT) and international recognitions (NASAD – USA). The program is distinguished by providing its students with a solid theoretical-methodological background that allows the development of new readings, narratives and strategies of communication and dissemination of art, based on a reflection on current philosophical concerns and social needs.

It focuses on the study of the artistic phenomena from an extended interdisciplinary view. It takes on theoretical and informative considerations, that place the artist and their work within a historical context, the museographic issues of an exhibition, its circulation and art criticism.

MAIN OBJECTIVES
To form researchers in Art Studies from an interdisciplinary perspective, as well as to enrich the interpretation of artistic practices and discourses on art in the cultural system in any historical moment. It also seeks to provide its students with a solid theoretical-methodological background that allows the creation of new readings, narratives and communication strategies for the promotion of art and art education. With these tools the graduate student will be able to influence the transformation of society. This program also prepares researchers to integrate themselves into the academic or private fields.

PARTICULAR OBJECTIVES

- Recognize the diverse areas of theoretical and practical specialization from a critical and creative approach, both which distinguish the artistically and cultural current fields.
- Develop analytical skills for the interpretation of the artistic phenomenon in its cultural and social dimension.
- Articulate knowledge about art studies and visual culture in an original and creative way, by linking theoretical, methodological and historiographical approaches of Art History with other disciplines.
- Develop research related to art and education, critical studies, and the configuration of cultural imaginaries and historiographic reviews of art with emphasis on Mexico and Latin America.

The program’s syllabus allows each student to adapt his/her own research project according to their interests. This flexibility allows each researcher the possibility of carrying out temporal investigations at other national or international institutions.

TEACHING AND LEARNING METHODOLOGY
The program is taught in Spanish. Since it’s a face-to-face program, classes are given in classrooms with the necessary infrastructure. Each subject is given as a seminar, which results in constant interaction, discussion and debate sessions. Classes develop around previously read texts, guided by the professor, with an analysis of the art works, artist testimonies, art critic texts. Visits to exhibitions are coordinated jointly with academics as well as conferences and study trips, activities which are important for the teaching-learning process.

At least one exhibition is carried out annually where the curatorship and assembly are done by the students in order to apply the theory and research learned in the classroom. An important part of the teaching methodology is related to providing students the opportunity to socialize, semi-annually, and discuss their partial research results.

CRITERIA AND EVALUATION PROCEDURES
Students must do oral presentations, research, participate in academic forums and resolve problems and cases, all as assigned by the academic responsible for each seminar. All students must participate in four Research Seminars and present their research advances in the Master’s Colloquium (Coloquio de Maestría) during the first three semesters. During the fourth semester, they must participate in their Pre-degree exam. The criteria of evaluation of the Seminars are explained in the “Manual de Titulación” that the student receives at the beginning of the program.

To graduate the student must have:

a) a valid English certificate;
b) satisfactorily completed all credits, without pending documents, report cards and evaluations, or library material;
c) satisfactorily pass the pre-degree exam during the IV Research Seminar;
d) participated in at least two high-level colloquia with a written manuscript (article, book chapter, book, curatorship, etc.);
e) a letter stating they have finished the last 10 credits of the program; these credits will be given at the completion of the thesis. The document is emitted by the Art Department;
f) the official government document that states the student has completed all credits. This document is emitted at Alumni Services;
g) the letter of approval by the director and two advisers of the thesis;
i) the approval, by Alumni Services, to present the degree exam;
j) satisfactorily pass the degree exam

DOUBLE DEGREE PROGRAM UNIVERSITÉ LUMIÈRE LYON 2
Students have the possibility to apply for an exchange program at the Master Mention LLCER Parcours Études Hispaniques de la UNIVERSITÉ LUMIÈRE LYON 2, with the aim of having a double degree.

a) Students, from both universities, must apply for the exchange program during the second year of the program.
b) Students, from both universities, will have a second thesis director during the exchange.
c) Expenses must be covered by the students.

Lines of Research / Research Projects:

Art and Education: Representations, policies and cultural practices around artistic education.

In recent recent years, the integration of the Arts in education has been the main focus of our projects. We are interested in the fundamental aspects in which art and education can interact to develop or strengthen values such as tolerance and respect for others, and the environment though the diverse forms of perception, sensibility and creativity with the practice in the arts and its critical analysis. We also believe that the Arts can help develop cognitive abilities that will allow people to adapt better to the ever changing world, and prepare him/her for the future.
All our students are currently involved in formal or informal education, public or private schools, and public or private cultural institutions. The academics involved in this line of research include: María Luisa Durán y Casahonda Torack Ph.D., Ivonne Lonna Ph. D., and Alberto Soto Cortés Ph. D.

Since 2016 our research priorities have been:

- to generate new methodologies around art and education applicable to the Latin American context;
- to identify the type of public who participate in the artistic phenomena;
- to analyze the relevance, the good practices and the policies of educational projects used in museums and cultural institutions;
- to recognize the social value of art in education;
- to analyze policies around cultural and art management;
- to recognize the social value of ICT’s in artistic education, and to find how technology contributes to the transformation of teaching art and its learning process;
- to come up with lines for prospective art educations, building new abilities and the use of new teaching tools;
- to study the challenges of art education in the 21st century and its impact in a postmodern generation

Critical Culture Studies: Policies and Powers of the Unseen.

This multidisciplinary line of research includes areas such as Art, Literature, Philosophy, History and Communication. It focuses on the eco-political conditions and cultural and artistic systems regarding problems of social and political exclusion, resistance and violence. The approach is given from three fundamental topics: policy administration regarding social dislocations and violence; policies and powers of the unseen: social exclusions and the underdogs; and Critical Theory regarding violence.

This line of research is coordinated by José Luis Barrios Ph.D with the project: Gestos de exclusión, exilios y diásporas de los cuerpos en el arte contemporáneo de México. Other researchers include Karen Cordero Reiman with Otra escritura femenina entre géneros. Escritura y arte como vehículos de resistencia, subversión y transformación en las luchas de género en el siglo XX; Jimena de Gortari with Salud urbana. La relación entre el entorno construido y el bienestar en los grupos vulnerables. Other projects include: Representación de la violencia y sus límites ante las tramas del capital by Francisco Castro; Derivas del capital: Migración, trabajo y ley en la poscolonia by Yerko Castro and Alejandro Agudo; La división del trabajo internacional y el estatuto de migrante: cuerpo, ley y espacio by Miguel Rábago; and Historia y poder destituyente: exclusión y fuerza by Ilán Semo.

Aesthetics, visual culture and imaginaries in Latin America and the Caribbean

This line of research deals with the configuration of cultural imaginaries of Latin America: its processes, dialogues, and alternative representations, through examples of visual culture and the aesthetic approaches of historical moments and studies of diverse cases.
Due to the complexity and diversity of Latin American culture, linguistically, ethnically, religiously, and ideologically, the interdisciplinary analysis of its intrinsic processes of search and construction of cultural repertoires of social and individual identification is necessary. The reference to political, artistic, architectural, literary, urban, educational, social imaginaries, among others, will allow opening new paths for the interpretation of art studies, recognizing the impact of the artistic image in the construction, evolution and effects about the imaginaries. It is integrated by: Olga M. Rodríguez, Ph. D.: Memoria y representación en el arte latinoamericano y caribeño; Luis Javier Cuesta Hernández, Ph. D.: La construcción de una cultura de imágenes: arquitectura y escultura novohispana en los siglos XVII y XVIII and Alberto Soto Cortés, Ph. D.: Cultura visual en Nueva España: creación, circulación y consumo de impresos y su influencia en la plástica, siglos XVI al XVIII.

Modern and Contemporary Mexican Art: Cultural memory, Public art and Historiographic narratives

The main theme of this line is the study of modern and contemporary Mexican art, focusing on cultural memory, public art and historiographical narratives, approached from interdisciplinary study perspectives that contemplate different cultural manifestations and supports such as the plastic arts, photography, literature, design, historical context, and its many interrelations.

Our main interest is to study the construction of cultural memory, in relation to public art, power, violence and gender in modern and contemporary Mexican art, and to develop innovative research fields that contribute to the analysis of some of the main problems of the current Mexican society.

From this, the following research axes are deployed:

- Cultural memory, imaginaries and identities through different visual supports.
- New theoretical-methodological paradigms of visual studies, with particular attention to relations of power, violence, public art and gender perspectives.
- Application of the theoretical studies carried out to generate research projects and dissemination of the arts in order to achieve a broad social projection.

Research Chair: De-territorialization of power: body and exclusion (Esthetics, politics and violence in globalized modernity)

It is an interdepartmental chair which involves the Departments of Art, Anthropology, Social Sciences, Communication, Law, Philosophy, History and Literature, coordinated by José Luis Barrios Lara, Ph. D.

This project proposes a complex analysis of the ways in which violence and extreme exclusion are inscribed in bodies. This project seeks to show how the devices of power have directly articulated with the body (Foucault). In particular, it is important to investigate, through the material productions of culture and complex forms of social composition (Raunig)*, the relations between migration, power and violence in the context of the crisis of globalized modernity.

To carry out these analyzes, the project specifies its specific objects of study in:
1. Native rural cultural configurations of the Oaxaca region weakened by the migration process.
2. Configurations of undocumented migrants from Central America on their way through Mexico to the United States that travel along the Southeast and Gulf of Mexico routes.
3. Social configurations of female and male sexual commerce established in violent urban environments, particularly in Mexico City.

Trajectory of school tracking (tutors - students)

When students enter our Masters Program, our Academic Council Board assigns them tutors/directors, who will follow-up on their academic and research development throughout their time in the program. This process will allow the student to efficiently write and finish his/her thesis.

The ratio between tutors/director and alumni for the Autumn 2017 semester was:

Relevant academic productivity

Professors from our program produce a wide range of academic texts. All of which are published both in national and international journals, as well as in our University’s publishing house. Likewise, our full time and associate professors are part of “Nierika. Art Studies Magazine” Editorial Board, edited by the same Art Department, where academics and students work together with internationally renowned researchers.
The Art Department also has a program of publications that include: textbooks to support teaching, outstanding theses, results of individual and collective research conducted by academics and invited scholars, and works presented at colloquiums and seminars. This program seeks to support the availability of sources and documents for the study of art and the dissemination of departmental research projects.

Exhibitions with collective curatorships (academics / students)

The Art Department organizes at least one exhibition a year (without considering other exhibitions in which academics and/or students collaborate).

- Para participar en lo justo: recuperando la obra de Fanny Rabel. August through October, 2013, Galería Universitaria Andrea Pozzo, S.J.

For this process it is essential to first review and compare the applicant’s original academic curriculum program. It is also important that the accepted students bring with them all certified official documents to Mexico. In some cases, where the equivalence of qualifications does not correspond to Mexican standards, an additional procedure will be requested. Please contact us for more information.

Foreign students will have to be in Mexican territory at least fifteen days before classes begin.

SUGGESTED GUIDELINES FOR THE PROJECT DRAFT

There is no unique way to present the project, however it is suggested that you have at least these parameters:

Topic: brief description of the topic of the work and / or the tentative title;
Delimitation: definition of the time and space to be treated, and / or the works, artists, exhibitions or cases to be studied;
Rationale: references (documented in the respective notes) to studies or scholars who have addressed the topic and a brief reflection on the scope of those already existing works;
Definition of the Problem: the main problems can be explained through a reasoned narrative or in the form of questions;
Hypothesis: what will be proven throughout the investigation;
General objective (s): these are the main actions to be carried out throughout the investigation (examples: to analyze..., to study..., to problematize..., to reflect..., to investigate..., etc.);

Methodology: a description of the approach or way of conceptualizing the study and the analysis instruments that are proposed: interviews, field work, processing of archival material, direct observation, surveys, review of documentary sources, conception of indicators or analysis variables, statistical analysis, flow charts, etc. It may be pertinent to mention the main authors who have served or will serve as references or methodological models, using a correct critical apparatus, and explaining why they are coherent with the approach of the preliminary draft;

Scheme or tentative index: presentation of a tentative structure of the thesis;
List of sources: list, in an appropriate academic format, the sources consulted for the development of the project, and others that have been identified as fundamental for the investigation.
